Reading to Kids began with a small group of volunteers, teachers, and administrators who shared the same dream: to inspire children with a love of reading. Reading aloud to a child helps spark a love of books that leads to improved literacy, a more fruitful and successful education, and a brighter and more productive future.

During 2006-2007, Reading to Kids conducted reading clubs on the second Saturday of every month at six Los Angeles elementary schools: Esperanza, Gratts, Hoover, Magnolia, Politi, and White. Between reading clubs, the Reading to Kids Program Director and Program Coordinator worked in partnership with volunteer Taskforce Committees to coordinate and deliver the best reading clubs possible.

With an average of 745 children and 279 volunteers each month in 2006-2007, our reading clubs helped to make reading an integral part of the lives of children and their families. During the monthly events, volunteers read teacher-selected books to small groups of eager children at each of our schools.

While many kids are sleeping in late, or sitting in front of the television on a Saturday morning, the children at Reading to Kids are spending the morning captivated by a book – surrounded by other children who share a passion for reading, and fun, enthusiastic, and dedicated volunteers. They practice new words, engage in discussions about characters and plot, and create a craft that reinforces the themes of the book. While the children and volunteers share their books, the teachers host a special training session for parents, offering advice to parents on encouraging their children to read at home, and providing them with information regarding educational resources in their community.

At the end of the reading clubs, the children and parents in attendance each go home with a brand new book to help build their home libraries. All of the hardcover read-aloud books are purchased by Reading to Kids and donated to the libraries at each of our schools. Since 1999, we have given away more than 50,000 prize books to children, parents, and teachers, and have donated more than 8,800 hardcover books to the school libraries.

“The single most important activity for building the knowledge required for eventual success in reading is reading aloud to children.”

- National Commission on Reading
Reading to Kids is dedicated to:

- Promoting improved reading and learning skills in elementary school children who are from low-income families, are recent immigrants to the country, are English language learners, and/or have room for substantial improvement in reading test scores.

- Providing participants, both children and parents, with prize books to foster the development of child-appropriate home libraries.

- Training the parents of participating children to extend the benefits of the reading clubs to the home environment.

- Developing the library resources of participating schools through monthly hardcover book donations of the books read aloud during the reading clubs.

- Providing an enriching and rewarding volunteer opportunity.

- Expanding our successful Reading Club Program to additional Los Angeles area elementary schools.

Reading to Kids is incorporated as a nonprofit corporation under the laws of the state of California and has been classified as an organization described in Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. The organization is exempt from both state and federal taxes.

Our program has attracted more than 6,600 volunteers since 1999, contributing more than 50,000 volunteer hours.
In May of 1999, a group of volunteers, teachers, and administrators combined forces to begin a monthly series of reading clubs at Gratts Elementary School. Eight volunteers and twenty children attended the first reading club. In June 2007, 305 volunteers helped share the power of reading with 974 kids.

Reading to Kids has flourished over the past year. We hired a second full-time staff person, expanded to additional elementary school sites in the downtown Los Angeles area, and increased attendance at the reading clubs to a monthly average of 279 volunteers and 745 children in 2006-2007—and our numbers continue to grow. In the past year alone, we have given away over 13,700 books to children, parents, teachers, and school libraries—a record for our program.

The children who attend our clubs are at significant risk for academic failure. They are primarily English language learners. Most have substantial room for improvement on their reading test scores, and virtually all are from low-income families. According to teachers at our schools, the majority of students read at one to two grades below the age-appropriate level. Our reading clubs on the second Saturday of each month provide these children with an extracurricular opportunity to engage in a fun reading atmosphere and listen to English speakers read aloud. Kids emerge from our program with more enthusiasm for reading, books for their home libraries, stronger school libraries, personal relationships with volunteers, and improved attitudes toward reading in English.

Even as we make progress toward advancing a culture of literacy in Los Angeles, much remains to be done. Over the next year, we will explore expanding the program into other Los Angeles elementary schools, with the goal of establishing reading clubs in at least two additional schools. With a committed Board of Directors, dedicated Taskforce members, and enthusiastic volunteers, we are ready to move forward and make this year the best one yet for Reading to Kids.

Our program will continue to work with schools to inspire underserved children with a love of reading. As we work together to promote literacy among children in our city, we remain committed to the goal of creating lifelong readers who will achieve not only personal success, but who will also make profound contributions to their communities in the future.

Sincerely,

Program Director
Reading to Kids
From July 2006 to June 2007:

★ A total of 3,351 Reading to Kids volunteers read to 8,943 children at Los Angeles schools.

★ Reading to Kids donated 1,513 hardcover books to school libraries.

★ Reading to Kids donated 12,217 books to participating students, parents, and teachers.

★ Reading to Kids staff and volunteers showcased the program at the Los Angeles Times Festival of Books.

★ In November 2006, Politi Elementary hosted its first reading club.

★ In April 2007, White Elementary hosted its first reading club.
How the Reading Clubs Work

1. Before the Clubs
   On the second Saturday of each month, Reading to Kids hosts reading clubs at participating elementary schools in the downtown Los Angeles area. In the weeks preceding each month’s reading clubs, volunteers use the Reading to Kids website to sign up to attend, browse for tips on reading aloud to children, and review the books that we will be reading.

2. Training & Preparation
   On the day of the reading clubs, Site and Grade Level Coordinators arrive early at each school to set up for the volunteers, who arrive between 8:45 and 9:15 a.m. At 9:00 a.m., new volunteers participate in a 30-minute teacher-led training session that familiarizes them with the program and provides tips on reading aloud. At 9:15 a.m., returning volunteers are engaged in a 15 minute volunteer-led training session that recaps the best practices of the reading clubs. At 9:30 a.m., the new volunteers are paired with returning volunteers to prepare for the reading clubs by reviewing books, classroom discussion topics, and craft ideas.

3. Reading Time
   While volunteers prepare for the reading clubs, teachers and administrators check in the arriving children and group them by grade level. At 10:00 a.m., the children and volunteers are brought together to begin the reading clubs. For ninety minutes, children are taken on a literary journey to fuel their imaginations.

   The books that are read aloud have been carefully chosen by teachers from each school to ensure they are age- and theme-appropriate. Teachers are also available to assist the volunteers throughout the reading clubs. The volunteers not only read to the children, but they also bring up discussion questions regarding the books, explain challenging passages and vocabulary words, and encourage the children to participate in the discussion. For the children and volunteers alike, it is a fun and rewarding morning where kids can develop a love of reading.
At the conclusion of each reading club, volunteers give each child a book to take home. All participants then proceed to the main auditorium of the school to participate in a wrap-up session. During this time, children proudly share their craft projects and books with friends and/or family members who have arrived. Reading to Kids donates the featured books to each school library — three to seven copies per grade level each month.

Each reading club includes a craft period during which volunteers and children create a project related to the book. These projects are designed to stimulate further discussion about the book and encourage the children to explore their unique interpretation of the subject matter.

While the children are engaged in their literary journeys, school administrators and teachers also conduct parent training sessions. These sessions include information regarding available community resources and tips on how to encourage children to read at home. They also give participating parents a sense of empowerment regarding the education of their children. At the conclusion of the parent training sessions, parents also receive a book to take home to add to their family library.

Our parent training sessions offer invaluable information to the parents that support us.
Share the Power of Reading

It takes a lot of time, dedication and care to make a program like Reading to Kids a success. Those who have chosen to be a part of our story:

★ Children, who develop a love of reading that will last a lifetime.

★ Volunteers, who offer their energy, diverse backgrounds, and professional skills to the program.

★ Parents, whose commitment to the program is transforming the lives of their children.

★ Educators, who ensure the program meets the unique needs of the schools served.

★ Donors and supporters, whose generosity makes this program possible.

★ Our Staff and Board of Directors, whose tireless leadership brings the program to life.

60% of the children in the neighborhoods around our Reading to Kids schools have no age-appropriate reading material at home.

Kids and volunteers come together after the reading clubs.

Kids hold up their prize books.
The Child’s Experience:
Ask a typical volunteer what keeps him or her coming back to Reading to Kids, talk to our staff and directors about what drives them to be a part of our organization, or have our teachers and administrators explain why they embrace our program at their schools. They’ll all give you the same answer:

It’s all about the kids.

Through Reading to Kids, the children at our partner schools spend time with volunteers who are donating time with passion and enthusiasm. Our goal is to make sure the kids get all the benefits we can possible offer - a love of reading, a desire for higher education, a greater understanding of the world outside of their communities. The more we can motivate our participating kids to read, the better equipped they will be to meet and exceed the reading requirements of their grade levels.

For many of the kids, the most important part of the reading clubs is taking home their prize books - as it is the only way some of them are able to build their own personal libraries. For others, they can’t wait to get to the craft projects. All of them, however, have decided to come to school on a Saturday morning, on their own weekend time, to share the power of reading.

“...because they’re fun. We do arts projects. And, we get a free book. But one of my favorite things about the reading clubs are the volunteers that come to help us every month.”
-Benjamin Rodas, 4th Grade Student

“I have more books at home, so I read more. You learn things when you read a book. We have learned about art, and that you should never give up. We’ve learned that just because people don’t look like you, it’s not bad. You have to learn what they are inside.”
-Graciela Castillo, 4th Grade
Reading to Kids’ success in inspiring and educating children is rooted in the enthusiasm and commitment of the over 800 active volunteers who donate their free time, expertise, and financial resources to the organization each month. From 18 to 87 years old, and from many cultural and professional backgrounds, our volunteers are the backbone of the reading clubs. Since the first reading club at Gratts, through June 30, 2007, over 6,600 individuals have volunteered with the program, donating the equivalent of over $900,000 in volunteer time (dollar value of volunteer time assigned by Independent Sector) over the course of almost 52,000 volunteer hours.

The children benefit immeasurably from the dedication of the volunteers, while the volunteers themselves place great value on the time they spend at the schools. Many have asserted that the Saturdays they spend with Reading to Kids are the best they have over the course of the year, and that the organization offers them — many as newcomers to the city — a sense of community and purpose.

Our most active volunteers, mobilized within our volunteer Taskforce, are organized into committees that delegate and execute tasks and projects in partnership with the Program Director and Program Coordinator—Reading to Kids’ only employees. Key volunteers assume the roles of the Taskforce Committee chairs, who organize the following committees: Curriculum, Executive, Fundraising, Marketing, Operations, School Relations, Special Events, Strategic Planning, Training, Volunteer Relations, and Website. The diversity and expertise of our Taskforce is the organization’s greatest asset and the key to its success.

As our organization grows, so too does our family of volunteers who are as dependable and dedicated as ever. Clearly, the people who give their time to us and to the children, collectively represent our most valuable source of power.

While volunteers are clearly driven by the socioeconomic need to give so much of their time and effort to this cause, it is the excitement and electric energy of the children that keep these dedicated volunteers coming back. For all the details we can give about these amazing Saturday mornings, the only way to truly understand the impact is to attend a reading club yourself.

Share the Power: Parents

“She needed help with her reading. Coming to Reading to Kids motivates her. She comes home with different books, and she talks about what she read.”

-Victoria Viellegas
Guardian of Graciela Castillo

“The Parent Experience:

From encouraging their children to attend the reading clubs, to participating in the parent training sessions, to reading to their children at home, parents provide invaluable support to our organization. Parents want to see their children succeed, and they share our belief that the power of reading can help open the door of opportunity in the future.

“Reading to Kids has helped me to connect with the school. I have made friends and I feel more in contact with everyone. [In the parent training sessions,] I learn things like new ideas about how to help my child with school. Like today, we learned about how to help with writing paragraphs. Brian reads more at home than before he came to the reading clubs, and I read to him more after we started coming to Reading to Kids.”

-Leslie Solis
Mother of Brian Galeano
“Reading to Kids has provided our students and their parents with a great opportunity for enrichment. They interact with volunteers from across the city in a warm and friendly environment. The children get to read with their peers and participate in fun art activities. More importantly, each month they have something great to look forward to.”

– Dr. Luis Valentino, Principal
Gratts Elementary School

At the school level, teachers and administrators are essential in building and maintaining a successful Reading to Kids program. The principals, assistant principals, teachers, and literacy coordinators recruit students each month, select the books used in the program, and provide overall guidance concerning the needs of each school. Like the children and volunteers, teachers and administrators show up every month on their own time to encourage their students to take part in the reading clubs. From signing in the students, to training new volunteers, to leading the parent training program, educators bring our program to life at the schools.

“Our volunteers have varied backgrounds, represent a range of ages and are from many different ethnic groups. Not only are we developing their love for reading, but we are also helping to introduce the children to the world outside their immediate neighborhood. I truly believe that we serve as role models for the kids.”

Reading to Kids gives children the confidence to read by themselves, even at an early age.
